

A STEP IN LITERATURE.

The APPEAL is in receipt of "Tales of Soldiers and Civilians," by Ambrose Bierce.

The book is not destined to make any pronounced stir in the present generation, but it will live through the next and then become an enduring classic of the war.

The author has been before the public many years, a vastly misunderstood and badly appreciated man. He has never written for the public applause, never catered to the mob or ever gone out of his way to shake hands with the critics. He is the strongest writer of the present generation and by all odds the most original. His satire has the keen swish of the scimitar, his style is something unapproachable in its perfection and his descriptive work the very acme of force and beauty.

In his stories the reader follows a new path with a surprise at every turn of the road. The denouement is the greatest shock of all and when you have reached it you pinch yourself to be certain that you are awake.

Some of the battle scenes are masterpieces of the horrible, and through all is a brutal descriptive faculty found nowhere else in literature outside of Hugo. Dying horses beat the brains out of their masters; soldiers kill their comrades to put them out of misery, and filthy swine root with bloody muzzles in the entrails of the slain. When dealing with the motives of human beings, he is denounced as a cynic, but his cynicism comes from a keener observation and deeper psychological penetration into human nature than his fellows. He sees mankind as it is, not as it appears. The book abounds in fine touches of this rare faculty vouchsafed to the few.

One would like to see such a work take the place at once that it ought by its own worth to occupy in literature, but so long as the reading public is content to pour over the driveling platitudes of Black, the long and aimlessly spun out stuff of Howells and the erratic slush that flows from so many pens, one can not expect a popular welcome to Mr. Bierce.

It would take lots more of such books to lift the public taste to their level and if Bierce does not write them no one else can. The book is a stride in literature.

GEORGIA FOR SILVER.

Representative Lester of Georgia has just returned to Washington from a visit to his State. While at home Mr. Lester took occasion to study the political situation, and he reports the Farmers' Alliance making alarming progress. Mr. Lester is a Democrat, but he insists that his party will have to exert itself to the utmost to carry the State this fall.

"The people of the State want free silver, and they demand several other things endorsed by the Alliance," said Mr. Lester. "The are becoming dissatisfied with both the old parties. Georgia is considered strongly Democratic, and it always has been so, but it looks to me as if the Alliance would carry it at the coming election. Unless something is done to check the growth of the Alliance down I sincerely believe the third party will be able to secure the Presidential electors from Georgia.

This opinion is supported by that of several other members of the Georgia delegation in Congress.

Mr. William P. St. John who is the president of the Mercantile National Bank of New York city has just come out flat-footed for free coinage. He is one of most clear headed and conservative bankers in New York and his concession to bimetalism has astonished Wall Street.

Mr. St. John has probably reached the conclusion that prosperity in all branches of business means prosperous banking also.

Bob Fulton,—who draws $250 a month as resident Land Agent of the S. P. R. R. and more as long as the Board of Trade fake lasted—is very much afraid that the silver party is formed to prevent the building of a competing line.

It seems that the Harrison and Cleveland mutual administration society of Reno tried to side-track the Silver Club meeting at that place. We would like to see a Silver League in Humboldt interrupted by any gold-bug hoodlums.—Silver State.
